In speaking of the Holy Spirit, Cyril of Alexandria (ca. 376-444) wrote, "But, rather, just as we should say that the fragrance of sweet-smelling herbs which assails our nostrils is distinct from the herbs so far as their conception in thought is concerned...even such an idea, or rather one transcending this, must you imagine about the relation of God to the Holy Spirit. For He is, as it were, a sweet savour of His Substance, working plainly on the senses, conveying to the creature an effluence ["something that flows out"-mc] from God, and instilling in him through Itself participation in the Sovereign Substance of the Universe. For if the fragrance of sweet herbs imparts some of its power to garments with which it comes in contact, and in some sort transforms its surroundings into likeness with itself, surely the Holy Ghost has power, since He is by nature of God, to make those in whom He abides partakers in the Divine Nature through Himself" (Commentary on the Gospel of John, XI.2).

Cyril of Alexandria means this: Because the Holy Spirit is God, those He fills and influences are permeated with the "fragrance" of God. The Spirit, by His influencing and indwelling work, produces a divine "scent" within those in whom He resides. This idea of a divine scent also dovetails with the image of the Spirit as a fragrant oil, an image used throughout the Bible. Today, we're going to explore this imagery of the Spirit. The Spirit as a fragrant, anointing oil carries rich implications for His ministry under the new covenant of Jesus Christ, and it has something powerful to say to us today. – Matt Carver

Guests: Please fill out a yellow attendance card and drop it in the collection plate.
