Living Waters, Living Spirit

In the middle of the fourth century, Cyril of Jerusalem famously composed a series of nineteen lectures designed to instruct candidates for baptism on the faith to which they were committing. In his lecture on the Holy Spirit, he had this to say that's particularly relevant to our topic today: "And why did he call the grace of the Spirit water? Because by water all things subsist; because water brings forth grass and living things; because the water of the rain showers comes down from heaven; because it comes down one in form but works in many forms. For one fountain waters the whole of paradise, and one and the same rain comes down on all the world, yet it becomes white in the lily, and red in the rose, and purple in violets and hyacinths, and different and varied in each. So it is one in the palm tree, and another in the vine, and all in all things; and yet it is one in nature, not diverse from itself. For the rain does not change itself and come down first as one thing, then as another, but adapting itself to the constitution of each thing that receives it, it becomes to each what is suitable" (Catechetical Lectures, 16.11-12).

Today, we're looking at the Holy Spirit through the image of living water. Why did Jesus refer to the Spirit as living water? Cyril of Jerusalem is on to something. The Spirit refreshes and gives life to dead souls, and like rain that falls on a garden of diverse flowers, it produces diverse expressions of gifts and benefits in our lives. So, let's know the Holy Spirit better by knowing him as Living Water.

Guests: Please fill out a yellow attendance card and drop it in the collection plate.
